Bring Troops Home if Death Toll Climbs: Poll

Josh Pringle
Sunday, May 6, 2007

48 per cent of Canadians are questioning the Federal Conservative Government's handling of the mission in Afghanistan.

An SES Research-Sun Media national survey finds 48 per cent of respondents disagree or somewhat disagree with the government. 44 per cent of Canadians agree or somewhat agree with how the military operation is being managed.

The poll also finds 55 per cent of Canadians want to bring the troops home if the death toll continues to rise, compared to 39 per cent who suggest casualties are an unfortunate but necessary part of the mission.

54 Canadian soldiers have died in Afghanistan since 2002.

The poll shows a majority of Canadians believe Canada's mission in Afghanistan is making this country more vulnerable to a terrorist attack.
